How we understand the negative may determine whether it sabotages the process of psychoanalytic psychotherapy or serves as an engine of therapeutic action. Transference, counter-transference, and projective identification, for example, initially conceived as subverting the effectiveness of psychoanalytic psychotherapy, have been reconceived as vehicles of unconscious communication between patient and analyst and engines of therapeutic action.

Immersion in the negative expands the therapist's awareness of the patient's internal world. "Negative capability" affords the therapist internal space to deliberate alternative perspectives in the complex field of here-and-now work with patients. The sleep of enactments may precede the awakening of understanding.

This year's intensive study groups will investigate theoretical approaches to the negative and practical engagements with it in the clinical setting. The syllabus will include films and plays that illustrate course themes. Explore with our experienced instructors how apparent challenges to psychotherapy may vitally contribute to the process of human transformation.

In this introductory event to the year-long Intensive Study Groups in San Francisco and the East Bay, we will explore how to work with the negative in the therapeutic process. We will have an informal, dynamic conversation with Megan Rundel and Alexander Zinchenko from the East Bay, as well as Era Lowenstein and Diane Borden from San Francisco. If you are considering registering for the upcoming ISG in the fall, this introductory conversation is an opportunity to bring your questions and comments to four of our instructors.

In the upcoming Intensive Study Groups, we will investigate theoretical approaches and practical engagements with the negative as they occur in the clinical setting. Topics such as trauma, Eros and the death drive, negative therapeutic reaction, psychic retreats, perverse modes of relating, destructive narcissism, and excessive splitting will be discussed.

Dates   Time:	Every other week September 2018 - June 2019 (exact dates/times TBD)

The frenetic pace of agency work in community mental health makes finding time and space to think deeply about our work difficult. With the pressures of documentation requirements, community trauma, and limited resources, these demands overshadow clinical thinking. In response to the needs of our community, NCSPP is providing an additional forum to reflect on our clinical work. We are offering two consultation groups: one focused on clinical work, the other on supervisory work.

The clinical consultation group will process clinical work by licensed or unlicensed employees of county-funded or non-profit agencies. The supervisory group will support new CMH agency supervisors thinking more about the supervisory relationship.

These consultation groups will be led by seasoned clinicians who have experience in community settings.

MISSING IN ACTION: The Analyst's Intersubjective Collision with Unsymbolized Thought and Unrepresented Mental States

Workshop

Instructor:	Rose Gupta, Psy.D., LCSW, and Mali A. Mann, M.D.
CE:	4 CE Credits
Location:	San Francisco Center for Psychoanalysis (SFCP) 444 Natoma Street, San Francisco, CA 94103
Date:	Saturday, September 22, 2018
Time:	1:00 – 5:00 pm
Tuition:	$140 General Public   $100 NCSPP Full Members $88 NCSPP CMH Members   $80 NCSPP Associate Members $60 NCSPP Student Members   $60 Scholarship Rate (prior approval required — see website for details)

In response to participants from “Locating Unrepresented Thought” in Spring 2017, we’re elaborating on the interrelationship between intersubjectivity, unrepresented states, and unsymbolized thought and offering more clinical examples of the extended use of the analyst’s mind. We will talk about a relational, intersubjective view whereby thoughts are made from the interactions between subjects. We draw from Ferenczi’s semiotics theory (Aron and Harris, 1997), delineating the progression of symbolization from action to thought: when the capacity for thought is disrupted, the internal object is present as an unsymbolized object in an unrepresented state. The analytic collision with the unsymbolized is then taken up by Ferenczi (1932) and Botella and Botella (2005). We will discuss their emphasis on the importance of making an extended use of the analyst’s mind, such as “working as a double.”

FOUNDATIONS: Six Dialogues on Freud and the Sexual Course

Instructor: Israel Katz, M.D.
CE: 9 CE Credits

 2837 Claremont Boulevard, Berkeley, CA 94705
Date: Tuesdays, September 25 – October 30, 2018
Time: 7:30 – 9:00 pm

The goal of this course is to introduce students to the theoretical and clinical relevance of Freud's notion of infantile sexuality, which remains revolutionary and radical even after more than a hundred years. We start with the second of Freud's Three Essays on the Theory of Sexuality, where he discusses sexuality in infancy and childhood. We will read a new English translation of Freud's 1905 original German text of a "non-Oedipal" and potentially non-heteronormative psychoanalysis, along with Strachey's translation that incorporates Freud's later editions and rewritings. We will then discuss the manifestations of the sexual in the clinical situation, including the destinies/fates of the sexual drive, erogenous zones, the object, and the transference, with a consideration of sexual stages and afterwardsness (après-coup). We will focus on specific basic concepts and their usefulness in our everyday clinical work, with ample room for discussion.

WHITE LIES: Four Voices Working Across the Impossibility (and Possibilities) to Speak of Race and Immigration within Psychoanalysis Course

Furthering the discourse begun in Sue Saperstein's 2016 NCSPP Course "Difference Matters!," four individual clinicians commit to speak to the inclusion and clash of radical differences. This dialogue, facilitated by four racially and culturally dissimilar voices, will bring forward the theoretical, historical, and philosophical disparities in our current climate. Our practice of speech is intended to open a necessary, ethical discourse so as to keep learning from the Other and our Otherness.

The framework for this workshop will include discussion of culturally relevant readings from psychoanalysis, journalism, and literature as a way to speak of the underrepresented/unseen, and the challenges of psychic citizenship in its relation to power. We will work and move together to find an analytic position that addresses the painful gaps between psychoanalysis and lived experience, as they surface in the clinic and the classroom.

IN DARK TIMES: Psychoanalytic Perspectives on Totalitarian States of Mind Course

Instructor: Era A. Loewenstein, Ph.D.

 $198 NCSPP CMH Members | $180 NCSPP Associate Members
 $135 NCSPP Student Members | $135 Scholarship Rate
(prior approval required — see website for details)

We are currently witnessing the rise of fascist-like leaders globally, and, most alarmingly, in Europe as well as our own country. We observe how these leaders and their adherents collude to form basic assumption groups that could swiftly undermine our western democratic values and institutions.

In this seminar, we will explore various psychoanalytic contributions that can enhance our understanding of the totalitarian states of mind that spark these dangerous movements. We will consider how omnipotence and grandiosity can take over the personality, obviating guilt and trumping healthy uncertainty, which leads to the formation of psychotic-like totalitarian states of mind. We will consider racism and propaganda as they relate to these states — marked by narcissistic, perverse, and psychopathic features. We will consider these tyrannical states at the individual and the group level by discussing selected readings by Hannah Arendt, Herbert Rosenfeld, Christopher Bollas, Janine Chasseguet-Smirgel, Roger Money-Kyrle, and by the instructor.

Join NCSPP and PCPG for our 11th Annual Psychoanalytic Couple Psychotherapy Lecture as we host David Hewison of Tavistock Relationships. Dr. Hewison will highlight Winnicott's and Bollas' rich contributions to psychoanalysis and elaborate his own view on how these ideas can be creatively applied to understanding couple relationships. Following from this theoretical orientation, he will discuss the importance for the couple psychotherapist to focus on five areas in the clinical hour: the need for gesture to be properly met; the need to understand repetition in a creative way; the need to attend to mood and the emotional atmosphere, allowing it to unfold in the absence of interpretation; and the need to rethink the uses made of other people and other things outside the session. Shawnee Cuzzillo will serve as discussant and, in the afternoon, Dr. Hewison will illustrate his innovative ideas with a couple case presentation.
